Where do the clouds go when the skies are clear? - Quora

Clouds usually block UV rays, particularly UV-B; on a really overcast day they can keep out 70 to 90 percent of the UV-B coming in. Maddeningly enough, though, that's not where it ends. Under partly cloudy conditions a phenomenon sometimes called the "broken-cloud effect" can come into play, resulting in higher UV levels than a clear sky would produce, and so a greater risk of sunburn ...
