Here is a comparison of the T56 Magnum gearing vs the Toyota Supra Getrag V160. Notice the magnum's 4th gear is equivalent to the Supra 5th gear. As you can see, the t56magnum gearing is a good bit lower than the V160, so to get V160 style gearing requires a higher rear gear. Anywhere from 4.00-4.30 would mate up perfectly to this transmission.

Toyota / Getrag have discontinued support on the V160. Due to this, we will no longer be able to offer full services for this transmission. Many of the necessary parts needed to properly repair this transmission are just no longer available. While aftermarket alternatives do help, many of the necessary core components are not readily available.

I thought the V160 was the best transmission in the world!" And while I usually chuckle, this really is a valid question, and the V160/V161 has proven itself capable in my car as well as many other fast 6-speed cars. Getrag did their homework on that transmission and it is a beast.

I've heard they were built by Getrag. M90's at least (the RWD cousin of the M56) don't say Getrag on them anywhere though. They also don't have a standard Getrag number - like a Toyota Supra V160 is a Getrag 233. Not to say they aren't, but if they are, they don't appear to be a part of Getrag's standard "family" of transmissions.
